Defending Administrative License Suspension Hearings

DUI offenders in New Jersey are subject to a mandatory license suspension. This license suspension is a separate punishment that takes place within 30 days of DUI citation. It is imposed, in addition to the license restriction or suspension that will take place if you are convicted of the DUI charge. If you have been charged with a DUI in New Jersey it is important that you contact experienced attorneys at Fusco & Macaluso, today.

Your license will be suspended for a period of 3 months if you are proven to have a blood alcohol concentration (BAC) of .08% or more. If you are found to have unlawfully refused to take a chemical test for BAC, it is important that the arresting officer explained that if you refuse a chemical test your license will be automatically suspended for an extended period.

If this was not thoroughly explained to you, an experienced DUI lawyer, at Fusco & Macaluso, may use this as grounds for dismissal of the license suspension. Once you receive this document you should contact the experienced NJ Firm in Passaic County, such as Fusco & Macaluso right away! At the hearing, the DMV officer OR Municipal Court Judge will decide your case based on only a few issues.

- ✓ Were you driving the vehicle?
- ✓ Was there reasonable cause to arrest you?
- ✓ Was your BAC .08% or higher while driving the vehicle?
- ✓ If applicable, did you refuse the chemical test?
- ✓ If applicable, were you properly informed that chemical test refusal would result in license suspension?

Fusco & Macaluso is an experienced DUI Firm who can prepare a winning strategy in getting your suspension set aside. The Administrative hearing will not likely be decided the same day. DUI charges can lead to multiple license suspensions, probation, hefty fines and jail time depending on how many prior convictions. Our firm is highly experienced in representation of these cases, and knows how to attack and discredit breathalyzer and field sobriety tests.

Fusco & Macaluso, Passaic County, New Jersey are experienced DUI attorneys, who have successfully defended hundreds of people with their DUI charges. We will assess your case honestly and give you the best advice and best course of action for your defense.
