

Elder Abuse

Adult caretakers of elderly people are increasingly vulnerable to accusations of cases of to exploit and defraud the elderly they care for. If a caretaker has been given responsibility for managing the day-to-day financial affairs of the elderly person, sometimes accusations of fraud arise from a family member who discovers an elderly person made loans or gifts to a caretaker that weren't approved by other family members.

Fusco & Macaluso can hire experienced professional investigators who know how to interview an elderly person and to present them with conditions that are not intimidating.

If family members, relatives or friends accuse you of defrauding an elderly person, a professional economist can be hired to review the accusations and the transactions. An interview of the elderly person and you over the details of any questionable transaction can also help.

Your freedom and record are too important to entrust to an inexperienced attorney. Fusco and Macaluso have New Jersey's most experienced defense attorneys to help.
